Axicon Barcode Bureau specialise in providing barcode artwork and also advice using our EPS files to achieve good quality printed barcodes.

Creating original artwork for packaging or publications involves close attention to detail and when there is also a need for a barcode, the same care should be taken as this is the opportunity to incorporate an accurate barcode image that will result in the best quality final printed barcodes that scan easily and reliably.

Axicon specialise in creating accurately printed barcodes and have been helping customers achieve this high level of quality for over 30 years. The technical expertise that supports all the activities at Axicon also contributes to the writing of the international standards that are used throughout the different industries where barcodes are used.

The generation of accurate barcode images for use in original artwork is a service where Axicon's Barcode Bureau apply this expertise, checking the correctness of the data and assisting the customer's choice in getting the size of the barcode right and appropriate to the printing process that will be used. Every order is checked over once more by a second member of the team in order to provide the care and attention that we know our customers will want for their product.
